

Survey of Colorado Home Rule Municipalities

Volunteers from the League of Women Voters surveyed 29 municipalities to learn what campaign finance laws are in effect in Colorado. As predicted, most cities follow state law, although there are some specific variations. This report includes the map of geographic distribution of reported municipalities. The survey questions are listed, and the responses for each municipality are included.

Q1 For which municipality are you making this report?

Colorado Springs

Q2 Contributions: Does this municipality limit contributions to candidates? In the text boxes below, enter the office and the amount. For example, City Council Member $100; City Election Clerk, $100

Contribution Limit:

NoneQ3 Contributions: Is there more to say about the contribution limits of this municipality? Add details here.

Allows donations from corporations and labor organizations

Q4 Spending Limits: Does this municipality have spending limits on candidates' campaigns? Enter your information below. For example, City Council Member, $10,000; City Elections Clerk, $4,000

Spending Limits:

NoneQ5 Spending Limits: Is there more to say about the spending limits of this municipality? Add details here.Respondent skipped this question*Q6 Public Financing: Does this municipality have some form of public financing: matching funds, vouchers, etc? Give details below.

No

Q7 Independent Expenditures: In this municipality, are people making independent expenditures (money spent to advocate for or against a candidate that is NOT coordinated with a campaign) required to disclose their spending to election authorities?Yes -- Independent expenditures are reported to election authorities

Additional details:

Political committees are required to register and report if they spend over $200 in an election cycle.

Q8 Issue Campaigns: Does this municipality regulate contributions and/ or spending for issue campaigns? For example, ballot issues are often subject to intense campaigning, and they attract outside money -- how does this municipality address limits or disclosure for issues?

Issue committees are divided into two types, small scale (which accepts or makes contributions or expenditures in an amount that does not exceed $5,000.00 during an applicable election cycle) and issue committees (spends or accepts more than $5,000). Small scale committees are required to register and report if they spend more than $200 on an issue in an election cycle, while issue committee are required to register and report if they spend more than $5000 in an election cycle. There are no limits on contributions.

Q9 "Dark Money" (money contributed by undisclosed donors): Has this municipality seen dark money in past elections? For which campaigns? Have you seen a result of that spending?

Yes - the April 2019 City Council election attracted several hundred thousand dollars in outside money. The money was spent on several city council district seats, but primarily for two districts. The beneficiaries of the largest expenditures in those two districts lost on election day.

Q10 Enforcement: We know that enforcement is an area of weakness in our campaign finance laws. How does this municipality enforce its laws? Are there penalties? Do you have information about fines or other sanctions?

There are civil penalties prescribe by ordinance, but no one has been penalized to our knowledge.
